CANADIAN LABOUR LAW REPORTER

The Canadian Labour Law Reporter includes commentary, case law, legislation and a newsletter covering federal, provincial and territorial laws on employment standards, human rights, pay and employment equity, employment insurance, and collective bargaining.

- Legislation – The Reporter provides coverage of federal, provincial, and territorial laws on employment standards, human rights, pay and employment equity, employment insurance, and collective bargaining. This comprehensive research tool gives you all the relevant labour legislation across Canada.
- Commentary – In addition to commentary on key employment cases and practice tips, the Reporter also has case annotations at the end of each commentary section so you have more case law summary information at your fingertips.
- Case Law – Canadian Labour Law Reporter has full-text court case law and decisions from boards, tribunals, commissions, etc. all across Canada, going back to the 1940's. Our cases follow the same, clear style and are always easy to follow. All cases in the employment and labour areas are analysed by our experts and the most significant are published.
- Labour Notes Newsletter – If it's important for you to be aware of current events and issues in Canadian employment and labour law, you'll rely on this newsletter. Published bi-weekly, it will keep you abreast of legislative developments in employment, human rights, labour, pay equity and employment insurance law across Canada. It provides you with digests of ground-breaking cases that affect how you deal with employees, and includes vital economic statistics, and more. Feature articles give you practical insights into trends and emerging issues in these dynamic fields to help you keep yourself current and protect your company's interests and its employees.
